BRITISH

United Kingdom's extremely high import duty is again in process of discussion but whether there will actually be a reduction is problematical, since the British Government has asked for even more stringent economies. All aliens employed in British motion pictures must obtain a permit from the Ministery of Labor and only if there is no British subject suitable or available will permit be issued.

DENMARK

Denmark has no mandatory regulations regarding the exhibition of foreign films but does require import permits for each picture, most of which are imported on a flat rental basis. The Board of Supply then decides whether that particular film is worth that amount of money or whether it uses too great a portion of the importer's quota. Actually, very few applications are denied although occasionally the Board has cut the amount to be paid. Since the study of English is compulsory in Danish schools, there is no problem of dubbing or superimposed titles on American films.

FRANCE

France has an agreement with 10 United States film companies for a voluntary self-limitation of the number of films to be imported into France yearly; there is a small quota left for independent companies. Regarding exchange of francs into dollars to be sent out of the country, there is a similar difficulty to the British situation, only not as stringent.

Although superimposed titles are quite acceptable in the event of dubbing into French there is a requirement for such dubbing to be done in France.

Negative films are imported into France and prints are made there. Since the supply of raw stock is somewhat limited, French film companies and newsreels receive their stock first. What is left is allocated to imported films, under a quota arrangement.

Governmental "temporary" subsidy of French film producing and exhibiting companies comes from a special taxation on admission tickets and on films based on the length of the film.

GERMANY

Business men desiring to go to Germany should apply for a passport the same way as for trips to any other country.

Business men desiring to exchange information with German nationals whose names and addresses are known to them in any one of the four occupation zones, regarding availability, specifications, delivery dates and other details of a commercial nature should contact the German firm directly. Inquiries which cannot be directed to specific German firms should be addressed to the following agencies:

British and American Occupation Zones
Main Department for Foreign and Interzonal Trade Office for Economic Administration (Hauptabteilung Fur Aussen-Und Intersonenhandel, Verwaltungsamt Fur Wirtschaft), Melitta House, Minden, Westfalen

British Zone of Occupation, Germany.

French Occupation Zone.
Offuce du Commerce Exterior (Oficomex).
10 Stephanien Strasse, Baden-Baden, French Zone of Occupation, Germany.

Russian Occupation Zone
Trade and Commerce Branch, Headquarters of the Soviet Military Administration in Germany (Verwaltung Der Sovjetischen Militar-Administration), Berlin-Karlshorst, 2 Rolandseck, Germany.

Exports from the United States to Germany will, for the time being, continue to be handled under the direction of the occupation authorities and all purchases will be made on government account. Such inquiries should be directed to the Civil Affairs Division, War Department, Washington 25, D. C. In addition to straight import and export deals, the possibility exists for American business men to arrange for the shipment of raw materials to the merged British and American occupation zones for processing and reexport to the United States. Such propositions should be taken up with Joint Import-Export Agency, Minden, Westfalen, British Zone of Occupation.

ISRAELI

Israel's main difficulty as to the showing of foreign films is in the scarcity of dollar exchange. Educational films are not subject to costum duties.
There are no dubbing facilities in Israel. Although the official language is Hebrew, superimposed titles are in use generally.
Most films are shown in the 35mm houses in the large cities and in the 16mm houses throughout the country, many ot the latter being in open air theatres.

ITALIAN

Italy subsidizes local production by tax refunds. Another form of government help is in the new 2,500,000 lira import deposit required for each foreign film brought into the country, providing a fund from which Italian producers may borrow up to 60 percent of their film budget, returnable to importer after 10 years. An average Italian film costs from 60,000,000 to 150,000,000 lire; an "A" picture usually costs from 150,000,000 to 300,000,000 lire. For the most part, Ferrania C-7 raw stock film is used. French DuPont and Belgian Gaevert also used but only in small amounts due to the protective tariffs.

MEXICO

Mexico requires import permits for pictures, usually valid for one year. Since the request is submitted first to the Ministry of National Economy, then to four other agencies, there is usually some delay in allowance.
There is no import quota for U. S. films and no restrictions on transfer of foreign exchange to pay for imports. Also there is no official objection to dubbing of films in Spanish although in general superimposed titles are preferred.
There are numerous taxes imposed on imported films, such as censorship charges for each 300mm of films of 100 pesos, approximately 15 percent admission tax; 5 percent of gross receipts for income tax, 3 percent for mercantile tax. Social security taxes are on a sliding scale and distributing companies usually pay employees' as well as the company's Social Security payments.

SPAIN

Spain has exceedingly high custom duties on imported films, especially for United States pictures. Also, it is difficult to obtain import licenses; conditions are such that Spanish producers occasionally approach American companies proposing that they finance the Spanish company in exchange for that company's import license, which actually may not be forthcoming after the film is produced. Argentine films do not require these import licenses.
